

FIRST TURNTABLE

EAT C-SHARP

If you want to participate in the revival of vinyl, you will need something to play it on, and most entry-level record decks are respectful of neither your LPs nor of the music. Conversely, you may wish to just dip your toes rather than commit to a deck the price of a Porsche 911. EAT's C-Sharp is the fourth model from the Czech company otherwise known as the European Audio Team. It uses modern design and materials – carbon fibre and thermoplastic elastomer abound – in a sleek chassis, alongside simple operation and upgradeability to set newcomers on the path to analogue heaven. As EAT's founder, Jozefina Lichtenegger, is a fashion obsessive, it has the advantage of looking cool, too. Ken Kessler
£2,500, europeanaudioteam.com

For more high-tech gadgetry, go to robbreport.co.uk/tech

EAT aims to pack in the technology and ramp up performance levels but keep its decks looking slim and trim